PROGRAM

SCIENTIFIC PROGRAM

In the last few years the development of extracorporeal shockwave therapy (ESWT) in orthopedics and traumatology was very fast and successful. Shockwaves have been used to treat insertion tendinitis, non- or delayed unions, avascular necrosis of the head of femur and other necrotic bone alterations.

The ISMST Congress will offer the opportunity for an exchange of information between institutes, hospitals, physicians, societies and manufacturers of ESWT devices on the state-of-the-art of shockwave therapy in orthopedics and traumatology.
